

Public Advisory Note 10 The Use of Cling Film

Plastic packaging materials such as cling film confer many benefits, in particular they assist in preventing contamination of food by micro organisms. Cling films also provide considerable benefits of convenience to consumers but it is know that small amounts of chemicals can transfer into foods from such wrapping under certain circumstances. There is no evidence to suggest that the use of these chemicals has caused harm to human health and cling films remain suitable for most food uses
